MR. VICTOR OSADEBAMWEN AMADIN, M.Sc.

Lead Author | Policy Researcher | Financial Advisor | Community Leader

Victor Osadebamwen Amadin, M.Sc., is a distinguished public policy thinker, financial advisor, researcher, and community leader with over fifteen years of professional experience spanning applied research, financial services, policy development, community engagement, and institutional leadership across Nigeria and Canada.

Currently based in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, Victor serves as a Financial Advisor with one of Canada's leading financial institutions, where he specializes in financial planning, wealth advisory services, and advancing financial empowerment within diverse communities. His passion for economic inclusion and community development was further demonstrated during his tenure as a Newcomer Specialist, where he pioneered innovative programs that enhanced financial literacy, economic participation, and successful settlement outcomes for newcomers to Canada. His exceptional contributions earned him prestigious innovation and performance awards in recognition of his leadership and impact.

Beyond his professional career, Victor is deeply committed to civic engagement, scholarly advancement, and policy discourse. He serves as a Board Member of the Nigerian Canadian Association of Saskatoon (NCAS), a member of the African Policy & Research Consortium (APRC), and an Editorial Board Member and Program Manager of The New World Order of Social and Management Letters (NWOSML). Through these platforms, he actively promotes academic excellence, diaspora engagement, policy dialogue, and sustainable community development.

Victor is also the Senior Partner, Finance, Policy and Partnerships at Crestwood Consulting Corporation, where he leads strategic initiatives focused on public-private partnerships, policy innovation, governance, community development, and regional economic transformation. His work bridges academic scholarship and practical solutions, fostering evidence-based approaches to contemporary development challenges.

His research interests include postcolonial state formation, federalism in divided societies, governance in plural states, public policy, nation-building, institutional development, and the enduring influence of historical legacies on contemporary governance in Africa. Through his scholarship, he seeks to connect historical inquiry with practical policy solutions that contribute to sustainable development and inclusive governance.

Victor holds a Master of Science (M.Sc.) in International Relations and Strategic Studies, a Bachelor of Science (B.Sc.) in Political Science from Ambrose Alli University, Nigeria, and a Diploma in Business Administration from Saskatoon Business College, Canada.

An accomplished professional, author, and thought leader, Victor is driven by a passion for knowledge, leadership, and social transformation. Through his research, writing, and professional engagements, he continues to contribute meaningfully to conversations on governance, economic development, public policy, and nationhood across Africa and the global community.
